The Temporary Effects of Normal Work & Life Stress on the Body & Mind

For many of us, life can be so busy: juggling work and family commitments, maintaining a social life and finding time for ourselves. Not surprisingly, all this nervous and physical activity may occasionally cause us to feel a little tense or stressed. At the same time, we may experience mild muscle tension, nervous system discomfort, and occasional sleeplessness. Some women may also temporarily experience cramping at the start of, or during menstruation.¹ As all these factors are interconnected, it can be very helpful to break the cycle and support our muscular and nervous systems to ease some of the tension in our bodies and minds⁷.*
