Environmental, Seasonal, and Other Stresses

Build the Body’s Defenses with Whole Food Nutrient Solutions*

When the body’s natural histamine response function kicks in, many other systems are affected. These systems include the immune and respiratory systems, liver, and adrenal glands.

Building up defenses helps make sure these systems are working at optimal levels to support patient health.

Immune system—An environmental substance coming into contact with the body can create stress on the immune system.

Respiratory system—The histamine response function naturally causes muscle constriction in the lung’s bronchial tubes.

Liver—During a challenge, support for the liver encourages detoxification of the body.

Adrenal glands—If the body is under stress, adrenal glands secrete cortisol. This assists with the body’s natural response function and helps to combat the system’s interaction with environmental substances.
